Global Dimensions of Lead Poisoning The first attempt to systematically collect, compare and analyze published and unpublished data on human lead exposure and environmental lead contamination outside of the U.S. Provides case study analyses of six nations' experience with lead contamination and poisoning, and recommends international, regional, and local prevention policies. Jointly developed with the Environmental Defense Fund.	$10
International Action Plan for Preventing Lead Poisoning – 3rd Revised Edition Serves as a guide to international organizations, governments, NGOs, and the private sector by providing a framework for the actions that need to occur at all levels (international/regional, national, and local) to prevent lead poisoning. Describes the benefits of prevention and identifies priority action steps, such as the phase-out of leaded gasoline. Arabic version $15 English version $15 French version $15 Russian version $15 Spanish version $15
Myths and Realities of Phasing Out Leaded Gasoline Examines and refutes the persistent myths that are the primary obstacles to the worldwide elimination of leaded gasoline. Provides policymakers and opinion leaders in national governments, industry, and international organizations with the information needed to grasp the opportunity at hand to complete the phase-out of leaded gasoline. Arabic version $10 English version $10 French version $10 Russian version $10 Spanish version $10
Preventing Lead Poisoning in the Americas: Health, Environment, and Sustainable Development This bilingual (Spanish and English) report summarizes the conference and policy workshop held in Santiago, Chile during the Summit of the Americas in April 1998. These events were designed to increase awareness of previous commitments to leaded gasoline phase-out and prevention and develop regional policy recommendations for implementation.	$15
